

B1MB-22: Asian Variant 4

A TG story by Alloner

The B1MB-22 virus was a mystery to the world, its effects on the human mind were so unbelievable that the governments all around the world refrained to even report them to the public. As far as people knew, it was just another respiratory illness that was spreading very fast. But as cases started to surge, the governments were forced to release the minimum information in an almost pointless attempt to stop its spread. All that the public knew was that the virus infected its victims through bodily fluids and that it tampered with the person's cognitive functions. Reality, however, was much stranger...

Gavin Wilkie was a successful American businessman, always on the move from one meeting to the next. He thought nothing of indulging in the occasional fling, a way to relieve the stress of his job and his frequent travels. But on one particular trip to South Korea, he met a woman who would change his life forever. She was alluring and mysterious, with a fixation on Gavin that bordered on obsession. Her charms were such that the language barrier was almost irrelevant, and before Gavin could realize, he was leading her into his hotel room.

But when Gavin woke up the next morning, something was different. He felt strange, off-kilter, like his body was no longer his own. As he looked around, he realized the woman from last night had his head on her lap. He tried to get up but his body wouldn't obey him... The woman clutched his hand as she whispered something he couldn't understand. He felt a tingling sensation all over his body, and his thoughts became foggy. Gavin could feel his body changing. It was a slow process, but he could feel it happening. His muscles began to shrink, and his skin became soft and smooth. His hair grew longer, and his face became more feminine. He tried to fight it, but it was no use. He looked down to see that his chest was slowly becoming fuller, his nipples darker and more prominent.

He could feel his fingers lengthening, becoming thinner and delicate. His hips widened and his waist became smaller, creating curves that he never had before. Gavin could feel his penis shrinking away, softly brushing against the increasingly baggy robe...

The woman can't help but grin as Gavin's transformation comes to an end. Gavin can't believe what has happened to her. He knows he should be scared, but all he can think about is his new body and the intense pleasure it brings him. Somewhere in his cloudy mind, he realizes he's been infected with the B1MB-22 virus and that the rumors on the internet were true, but she can't bring herself to care. All she wants to do is enjoy her new life as a beautiful, sexy woman.
